The Building Products Guideline (BPR), which clearly refers to the phase of utilisation of one building, and consequently also to the utilisation of one building product, is supposed, primarily in the field of product quality, to guarantee the compliance with legal regulations with regard to the so-called "essential requirements" from a building, or building products respectively. This also includes the "harmlessness in terms of health".

The products of Mayer & Co Beschläge do comply, according to current knowledge, with the requirements of 14351-1:2006 "Windows and doors – Product standard, performance characteristics" in the particular Item 4.6 Dangerous Substances, as well as with EU Directive 2002/95/EC.

We hereby declare that our products meet, according to the abovementioned defaults, the "restriction of the marketing and use of certain dangerous substances", and consequently are harmless.
